President's Message

That's Unconstitutional!

By Richard D. Schuler, President

How many times have we heard or uttered those words? When we take the Bar Association oath of office, we promise to "uphold the Constitution". But what is in the Constitution? Have you ever actually read it? (And I'm not talking about the Cliff Notes version!)

These past several years, I've had the pleasure and honor of meeting two Supreme Court Justices (Justice Alito and Justice Thomas) and having dinner with another (Justice Scalia). All are extremely intelligent men whose main job it is to interpret the Constitution and its Amendments (there are 27). Here are some (I hope) fascinating facts about the Constitution and the men and women who have and still do interpret it for us: (I hope these peak your curiosity enough to make you want to give it a read!)

- 1. The U.S. Constitution has 4,440 words. It is the oldest and shortest written constitution of any government in the world.
- 2. Thomas Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, never signed the Constitution. He was serving as U.S. Minister to France (now called Ambassador) at the time of the convention.
- 3. At first, the Constitution wasn't even called the "Constitution" it was called "The Articles of Confederation".
- 4. When the Constitution was signed in 1787 in Philadelphia, the U.S. population was 4 million. Now we are approaching 300 million. Philadelphia was the nation's largest city with 40,000 inhabitants.
- 5. At least seven Constitutional Amendments were passed in order to reverse Supreme Court decisions. Some of the most - notable ones: the Thirteenth Amendment (1865), barring slavery, and the Fifteenth Amendment (1868), protecting the citizenship of African Americans, effectively overturned the Dred Scott v. Sandford decision of 1857. The Sixteenth Amendment (1913) gave Congress the power to levy an income tax, which had been previously outlawed by the Supreme Court in Pollock v. Farmer's Loan & Trust (1895). And the Twenty-Sixth Amendment (1971) overturned Oregon v. Mitchell which, among other things, held that Congress could not regulate the voting age in state elections. The Amendment set the voting age at 18 years.

- 6. The Constitution does not set forth requirements for the right to vote. At the outset of the Union, only male property owners could vote. African Americans were not considered citizens, and women were excluded from the electoral process.
- 7. To Amend the Constitution, a proposal must be supported by 2/3rds of the House and Senate and 3/4ths of the States. As a result, of the thousands of proposed Amendments, only 27 have passed.
- 8. The oldest person to sign the Constitution was Benjamin Franklin (81). The youngest was Jonathan Dayton of New Jersey (26).

Supreme Court

- 1. At the Supreme Court's first session in 1790, a single justice showed up wearing a white wig (Justice William Cushing) that he had worn on the Massachusetts bench. He took so much ribbing for it he discarded it.
- 2. In 1790, the Chief Justice's salary was $4,000 (slightly less than my starting salary in 1972) while Associate Justices

Undertaker's Doctrine

by Ted Babbitt

The Undertaker's Doctrine in Florida has nothing to do with burying people. It relates instead to the responsibility of one who undertakes by contract or gratuitously to aid one in peril and fails to act as a reasonable man in carrying out that aid. The recent Florida Supreme Court opinion of Wallace v. Dean, 34 Fla. L. Weekly S52 (Fla. Jan. 22, 2009) explains the current Florida law both with respect to the Undertaker's Doctrine as well as the parameters of sovereign immunity.

The plaintiff in that wrongful death action suffered a dismissal of her claim with prejudice when she sued the Sheriff of Marion County for the actions of his Deputy in answering a call to come to the aid of plaintiff's decedent who had been found unconscious in her home. The Deputies, when asked to do so, failed to call an ambulance and assured the plaintiff and her mother's neighbors that her mother was merely sleeping despite the fact that they had literally screamed at her and shaken her violently enough to move her across her bed.

The case involved two issues. First, whether the Sheriff had any duty to act nonnegligently as to plaintiff's decedent and, second, if such a duty existed and negligence ensued, did sovereign immunity bar the action.

The Fifth District had affirmed the Circuit Court's order of dismissal on the theory, inter alia, that the Deputy's actions were merely passive nonfeasance rather than an act of negligence and at the most "poor judgment." The Supreme Court made short work of that argument stating:

"A failure to conform to the standard [of care] is negligence, therefore, even if it is due to clumsiness, stupidity, forgetfulness, an excitable temperament, or even sheer ignorance. An honest blunder, or a mistaken belief that no damage will result, may absolve the actor from moral blame, but the harm to others is still as great, and the actor's individual standards must give way in this area of the law to those of the public. In other words, society may require a person not to be awkward or a fool."

In answering the question of whether or not the Sheriff, through his Deputies, had a duty to plaintiff's decedent, the Court explained the underpinning of the "Undertaker's Doctrine." At S55, the Court held:

"As this Court recognized over sixty years ago in Banfield v. Addington, '[i]n every situation where a man undertakes to act,... he is under an implied legal obligation or duty to act with reasonable care, to the end that the person or property of others may not be injured.' 104 Fla. At 667, 140 So. At 896....

Voluntarily undertaking to do an act that if not accomplished with due care might increase the risk of harm to others or might result in harm to others due to their reliance upon the undertaking confers a duty of reasonable care, because it thereby 'creates a foreseeable zone of risk.' McCain v. Florida Power Corp., 593 So. 2d 500 (Fla. 1992); Kowkabany, 606 So. 2d at 720-21....' (Emphasis supplied by Court.)

Here the Sheriff's agents, responding to a 911 call, entered the decedent's home and assessed her safety and assured her neighbors and her daughter by phone that she was only asleep and didn't need medical attention. In fact, she was in a diabetic coma and died after being taken to a hospital the next day. At S56 the Court explains why this subjects the Sheriff to liability under the Undertaker's Doctrine.

"[w]here... the actor's assistance has put the other in a worse position than he was in before, either because the actual danger of harm to the other has been increased by the partial performance, or because the other, in reliance upon the undertaking, has been induced to forego other opportunities of obtaining assistance, the actor is not free to discontinue his services where a reasonable man would not do so. He will then be required to exercise reasonable care to terminate his services in such a manner that there is no unreasonable risk of harm to the other, or to continue them until they can be so terminated." (Emphasis supplied by Court.)

Having determined that the allegations of the complaint satisfactorily raised an issue which stated a cause of action because the Deputies' actions created a duty to nonnegligently perform their responsibilities, the Court next turned to the question of whether the action was nevertheless barred by sovereign immunity. To answer that question, the Court returned to the four part test contained in Commercial Carrier Corp. v. Indian River County, 371 So. 2d 1010 (Fla. 1979). That test requires at least one negative answer to one of the following four questions. First, does the challenged act, omission or decision necessarily involve a basic governmental policy, program, or objective? Second, is the questioned act, omission or decision essential to the realization or accomplishment of that policy, program, or objective as opposed to one which would not change the course or direction of the policy, program, or objective? Third, does the act, omission, or decision require the exercise of basic policy evaluation, judgment and expertise on the part of the governmental agency involved and finally, does the governmental agency involved possess the requisite constitutional, statutory, or lawful authority and duty to do or make the challenged act, omission, or decision? See Commercial Carrier, 371 So. 2d at 1019. Clearly a yes answer is required to both the first and fourth questions but the Court found that as to the second and

third questions the answer would be a decidedly clear "no." The Court reasoned as to the second question that performing a safety check more diligently would not in any way change the course or direction of the policy performing those checks and the Deputies did not have to exercise planning level evaluation or judgment. At S57, the Court held:

"Based upon our review of these questions, we hold that the alleged actions of the deputies' were undertaken, within the scope of their employment and were clearly operational in nature. Subjecting the Sheriff to responsibility and accountability in this case does not involve judicial scrutiny of any discretionary, quasi-legislative policy-making or planning; instead, such a legal inquiry will merely require the trier of fact to determine – consistent with traditional principles of Florida tort law – whether the deputies should have acted in a manner more consistent with the safety of the decedent. See Kaisner, 543 So. 2d at 737-38. The traditional principles of tort law implicated in this case in no way present a nonjusticiable political question." The Court was careful to explain that the test of whether actions of a governmental employee are discretionary and, therefore, immune from suit or operational and, therefore, not immune from suit, therefore, does not relate to the dictionary definition of discretion. Every voluntary act of a human being involves some discretion. Instead the test is as stated by the Court at S57:

"... discretion in the Commercial Carrier sense refers to discretion at the policy making or planning level." (emphasis supplied). 'Planning level functions are generally interpreted to be those requiring basic policy decisions, while operational level functions are those that implement policy." (Emphasis supplied by Court.) This four to three decision of the Florida Supreme Court explains and clarifies the Undertaker's Doctrine as Chief Justice Fuller felt that this was a good way to remind the Justices that, although they may have differences of opinion, they share a common purpose.

- 4. The longest serving Justice was William O. Douglas from 4/17/39 to 11/12/75 36 years, 209 days. At 40 years old, he was the second youngest to be appointed. Joseph Story of Massachusetts was the youngest at 32 years old. The oldest sitting Justice was Oliver Wendell Holmes who served until age 90.
- 5. Samuel Chase was the only Supreme - Court Justice to be impeached. The politically motivated charges failed in the Senate, however, in 1805.

- 6. Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase was the only Justice to appear on U.S. Currency. He was on the $10,000 bill, which is no longer printed.
- 7. George Washington appointed the most Supreme Court Justices (11) and only Franklin D. Roosevelt came close with 9 appointments. Jimmy Carter was the only full term President to have no appointments. William Taft was the only President to also serve as a Supreme Court Justice.

The Madoff Fraud And The Role of SIPC

Submitted By: Marc P. Barmat

Thanks to the now infamous Bernard L. Madoff, we have heard a lot about "SIPC." But what is SIPC and what role does it play with investors who have lost substantial amounts of money as a result of the Madoff fraud?

The Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970 "(SIPA") established the Securities Investor Protection Corporation ("SIPC"). SIPC is a quasi governmental agency whose focus is to restore funds to investors with assets in the hands of bankrupt and otherwise financially troubled brokerage firms.

When a brokerage firm is closed due to bankruptcy or other financial difficulties and customer assets are missing, SIPC steps in and, within certain limits, works to return customers' cash, stock and other securities. Without SIPC, investors at financially troubled brokerage firms might lose their securities or money forever or wait for years while their assets are tied up in court. Although not every investor is protected by SIPC, according to SIPC's website (www.sipc.org) no fewer than 99 percent of persons who are eligible get their investments back from SIPC.

SIPC does not cover individuals who are sold worthless stocks and other securities. SIPC helps individuals whose money, stocks and other securities are stolen by a broker or put at risk when a brokerage fails for other reasons. SIPC administers the SIPC Fund from which advances are made to satisfy customer claims. The fund is supported by assessments on SIPC member firms and its assets total $1.7 billion. In addition, SIPC maintains a commercial line of credit with an international consortium of banks, and by statute, has a $1 billion line of credit with the United States Treasury.

In the Madoff case, after Bernard Madoff confessed to having stolen customer property over a period of many years, a SIPC liquidation proceeding was initiated for his company, Bernard L. Madoff Investment Securities, LLC. A SIPC liquidation is a specialized form of a bankruptcy.

Unfortunately, the maximum amount under SIPA that SIPC can advance to any one claimant is $500,000.00, even if the claimant has a much higher valid claim. The extent of recovery by customers beyond the $500,000.00 maximum advanced by SIPC depends upon the amount of customer property that the trustee is able to recover on behalf of all victims. In the Madoff case, for example, a victim who has a valid claim for $10 million would only be eligible for a maximum of $500,000.00 from SIPC plus their pro rata share of what ever property is recovered by the trustee. It is estimated that Madoff's victims have claims of approximately $50 billion and that SIPC has identified approximately $830 million in liquid assets that may be subject to recovery. Accordingly, there is very little chance that most of Madoff's victims will ever be made financially whole.

Technology Corner

Streamlining Technology in Your Business

By John Vighetto, Vighetto Networking, Inc.

In today's economy, reducing as much overhead as possible with regards to technology is critical. Companies have always been faced with the constant changing, upgrading, and maintenance of their company's network infrastructure; however now more than ever, if certain steps are implemented in a timely fashion, you may not have to postpone a project; and more importantly, avoid reducing your staff size.

One of the ways technology costs can be cut is to closely review your service and maintenance contracts for items such as telephones, copiers, and mutifunction devices. If your contract is almost up, now would be the best time to renegotiate your terms (make sure that you're never locked into a contract longer than 3 years – preferably less). You also want to make sure that your existing provider does not have you set up for an automatic renewal on the contract you signed. Try to see if "bundling" services for either telephones and/or copiers/multifunction devices will cut some costs. For example, if your company has already downsized its support staff, do you really need those extra telephone lines right now? If your copier lease is close to renewal, you might opt to switch out your older copier/MFP (Multi-Function Printer) for a newer, faster, more feature rich MFP that will cost you less money, produce more, and (if you're not already taking advantage of this feature) print less paper by scanning to PDF (Portable Document Format).

Ever wonder why you no longer get a printed manual with any hardware you purchase? That's because the industry has figured out they can cut costs by printing their documentation either on a CD/DVD, or simply put it up on their website. Why can't you do the same? Think you can't because Adobe Acrobat would cost you somewhere aroung $450 for each workstation? Well, if you don't need to open up and edit a PDF file, you can download this free PDF writer from (http://www.cutepdf.com/). It's completely free of charge. If you need the latest

Are you agonizing about having to upgrade your existing workstations and/or laptops because either Microsoft or your current LOB (Line of Business) application will not provide support to older versions of their software? A good rule of thumb would be to purchase the recommended (not the minimum) hardware requirements and then scale up by a factor of 25%. Now, your existing workstation/laptop can be wiped clean, reloaded with a fresh copy of the operating system, the required software used to run your business, and give this to your support staff. In turn, their equipment can be wiped completely clean of all data, and that system can be donated to a local charity or educational institution.

Another way around hardware system upgrades is to invest in a server that would be used for running "virtual" workstations within your company's network. This server would be running either Windows XP or Vista workstations entirely from the server's memory. By doing this, you're automatically cutting out all of your hardware costs because the "workstations" are now hardware independent. Some of the advantages of of virtualization are lower support, maintenance, energy, and inventory costs. If you need to quickly ramp up your support staff, this can be done by creating new "sessions". The great news about this is that you don't have to allocate room for the increased staff size because these virtual sessions can be accessed remotely by the user.

These are only a few suggestions to ease the pain of the current economic shift. I'm sure that this will help you start to analyse what more you can do to cut down office costs (and hopefully not people). It would be wise to review the items above as well as other methods for saving money with your current IT consultant or company.

I welcome any and all suggestions for future technology articles. I can be reached by email at john@vighettonetworking.com, or through my website at http://vighettonetworking.com. Rights That Terminate at Death

By David M. Garten, Esq.

The purpose of the article is to explore those rights that terminate at death, i.e., those rights that are not enforceable either by or against the decedent's estate.

PRIVACY RIGHTS: Privacy rights are personal and die with the individual. See Nester v. Posner, 857 So. 2d 953 (Fla. 3rd DCA 2003). In Nester, the decedent's employees signed confidentiality agreements which barred the disclosure of any information regarding the decedent's private life, finances, state of mind, health, etc. One of the employees was a witness to the decedent's will. When the decedent's grandchildren sought information from the employee concerning the decedent's testamentary capacity and possible undue influence, the PR sued the grandchildren for tortious interference with the employee's confidentiality agreement. The grandchildren moved to have the confidentiality agreements nullified so they can conduct informal discovery interviews with the decedent's employees. The appellate court, in affirming the trial court's order nullifying the agreement as to the decedent's employee, reasoned that the PR could not enforce the agreement against the employee because the decedent's privilege did not survive his death. Privacy rights are personal and die with the individual. Although the agreement survives the employee's employment, there is no provision that requires confidentiality after the decedent's death.

CONTRACTS "PERSONAL" TO THE DECEDENT: A PR can properly refuse to perform the decedent's contract when the contract is "personal" to the decedent. A contract is "personal" to the decedent when the contract contemplates only the personal performance of the decedent, i.e., the PR could not perform as fully and as well as the decedent might have. See Bloom v. K & K Pipe & Supply Co., 390 So. 2d 770 (Fla. 4th DCA 1980) and Gunderson v. Sch. Dist, 937 So. 2d 777 (Fla. 1st DCA 2006).

In Bloom, the decedent sold all of his stock of a corporation to another stockholder. In connection with that transaction, the decedent entered into a contract pursuant to which he agreed neither to compete with the corporation nor answer questions relating to the corporation's business, in exchange for which, the decedent was to receive weekly payments for 10 years and two months. The decedent died after about one year, and the corporation stopped making the weekly payments provided for in the contract. The PR sued on the contract for the weekly payments. The appellate court, in affirming the trial court's dismissal of the complaint, reasoned that the covenant required the decedent to "answer any questions and respond to any request for information from K & K...." This covenant became impossible to enforce because of the decedent's death. Since the contract contemplated only the personal performance of the decedent and prohibited only the decedent from performing certain actions, the purpose of the contract was frustrated by the death of the decedent and therefore, became unenforceable by the PR.

In Frankel v. Bernstein, 334 So. 2d 37 (Fla. 3rd DCA 1976), the lessee entered into a lease of an apartment owned by lessors for a term of two years, to commence on the day following the termination date of her existing lease. The lessee died several months prior to the commencement of the second lease. Lessors filed an action against lessee's estate to enforce the renewal lease. The appellate court, in affirming the trial court's dismissal of the cause of action for accrued unpaid rent under the renewal lease, reasoned that under the terms of the lease it was meant only to have been a personal obligation of the lessee, namely her personal residence, and as such there was the implied condition that her death would have terminated the lease. But see Kensington Assocs. v. Moss, 426 So.2d 1076 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983)(A PR is liable under a lease if the lease contains a clause binding the heirs, executors, and assigns of the decedent/lessee and/or contained a clause allowing the decedent/lessee or his successors to assign the lease. Such language diminishes the personal nature of the lease terms.).

In Gunderson v. Sch. Dist, 937 So. 2d 777 (Fla. 1st DCA 2006), the decedent and his employer entered into a settlement of a workers' compensation claim before the decedent's passing. The agreement required the decedent to execute a general release and a voluntary resignation and stated that it was effective and binding upon the entry of an order approving a motion for attorney's fees. The decedent failed to execute either a general release or sign a voluntary resignation prior to his death. The widow, as PR, sought and received an order approving her motion for attorney's fees and later executed a general release and voluntary resignation on her husband's behalf. The appellate court, in reversing the trial court's order denying the PR's request to enforce the agreement, reasoned: "The main purpose of this settlement agreement was to bring to a close all litigation regarding the claimant's workers' compensation claims in return for a settlement payment. The duty of performance on the claimant's part was a duty which could statutorily be performed by his representative in the event of his death through the effectuation of the necessary documents. These were not duties which the claimant's death rendered impossible to perform. More importantly, the death of a claimant following the execution of a settlement agreement will not affect the agreement's enforcement if the personal representative can show that a binding contract was reached."

constitutional rights terminate at death. If any rights exist, they belong to the decedent's next of kin. See State v. Powell, 497 So. 2d 1188 (Fla. 1986)(parents' action claiming damages for the alleged wrongful removal of their sons' corneas and seeking a judgment declaring §732.9185, F.S. unconstitutional); Crocker v. Pleasant, 778 So. 2d 978 (Fla. 2001)(county's alleged violation of due process rights for failing to notify parents of their son's death).

Do You Need a Mentor?

The Palm Beach County Bar Association's Mentor Program is designed to provide members with a quick and simple way to obtain advice, ideas, suggestions, or general information from an attorney that is more experienced in a particular area of law. The mentors provide a ten-to-fifteen-minute telephone consultation with a fellow attorney, at no fee. Any member of the Palm Beach County Bar, whether newly admitted or an experienced practitioner, can use the program. Call the Bar office at 687-2800, if you need a Mentor.
